UNTRAMMELLED AFRICA

The Selous game reserve is Africa's largest protected area at 55,000 square kilometres. You will be based centrally in this vast expanse of raw Africa to enjoy true wilderness exclusivity. The flexibility offered by your dedicated camp staff delivers the ultimate in tailored safari adventures.

Your intimate seasonal camp, consisting of just four classically styled Arabian tents on the banks of the Luwegu River, offers the very best in spontaneous, authentic and credible moments to treasure. This offering caters exclusively to just eight guests, and therefore the camp must be booked in its entirety.

Characterised by the sweeping, primeval Luwegu and its many tributaries that provide the life blood for the concession, the Selous boasts riverine forest, stark rocky hills, golden grasslands and an array of wildlife. Vehicles are used as a platform from which to explore further, usually on foot; the magic of following the stately footprints of an old bull elephant, cut crisp and smooth in the white river sand, only to discover his tracks crossed by the passage of a female leopard dragging her recent kill to a nearby tamarind tree; the small and industrious workings of termites; the dead silence of midday interrupted by the sound of an old bull flapping his gigantic ears to cool him deep in the shade; to experience the rush of five hundred buffalo stampede away through tall grass.

Silently stalk a herd of elephant, wade the expansive river with your expert guides, or simply lie in the cascading, crystal clear water of a shaded tropical waterfall. Sleep under the stars on a sand bank beside the river or exert yourself on a multi-day walk.
